

IELTS Writing Examiner – Paid Marking Opportunity

The English Hub · Remote · Flexible · Paid per script

In short

We're building an AI-assisted IELTS Writing tool that helps learners improve, and we need qualified IELTS examiners to mark a set of practice essays. Your expert marks become the gold-standard reference that we measure our AI against — your judgement is what makes the tool trustworthy. It's flexible, remote, paid per script, and takes about 10–15 hours total over a couple of weeks.

What you'd be doing

You'll mark IELTS Writing Task 2 essays against the four official assessment criteria, on the 0–9 band scale:

1. Task Response (TR)
2. Coherence & Cohesion (CC)
3. Lexical Resource (LR)
4. Grammatical Range & Accuracy (GRA)

For each essay, through a simple online form, you give:

- a band (0–9) for each of the four criteria,
- a short note pointing to evidence in the text for each band (a sentence or two — what justifies it),
- the overall band.

That's it — exactly the marking you already do as an examiner, captured in a clean structured form instead of on paper.

What you're helping build (and why your marks matter)

We've built an AI marker for IELTS Writing. Before it's ever shown to a single learner, we have to prove it marks like a real examiner — that it lands within half a band of qualified humans, reliably. Your marks are that human reference. We compare the AI to you; if it doesn't agree closely enough, it stays switched off. So you're not "training a machine to replace examiners" — you're the quality benchmark that holds it to an examiner's standard.

Some of the essays you mark will be synthetically generated (written by the system to practise across the full band range). You mark them exactly as you would any real essay — band them on what's on the page.

Who we're looking for

You'd be a great fit if you have:

- Current or recent IELTS examiner certification (Writing), or equivalent expertise — e.g. DELTA/CELTA plus substantial IELTS-preparation teaching and marking against the public band descriptors;
- Fluent command of the IELTS Writing band descriptors for all four criteria;
- Native or near-native English;
- Consistency and attention to detail — your marks need to hold up against another examiner's;
- Comfort working online and independently to a deadline.

Senior/lead examiner experience is a plus — we also need someone to adjudicate the occasional disagreement and write short "why this is a Band 6" exemplar notes, which is paid at a higher rate.

How much you'll earn

- Paid per script (per essay marked and approved).
- Indicative rate: £4–£9 per script depending on your experience and certification — confirmed with you before you start.
- A typical marker grades ~40 essays in this round → roughly £160–£360 for ~10–12 hours' work.
- Exemplar annotations (the short "why this band" write-ups) and adjudications are paid at a higher per-item rate.
- Paid promptly on approval of your completed, QA-passed marks.

If this becomes ongoing, there's a modest monthly top-up of fresh essays to mark.

The process, end to end

1. Apply — reply with your IELTS examiner credentials and availability.
2. Onboard — we set you up with a marker account, confirm your rate, and you accept a short consent (that your marks may be used to calibrate the tool).
3. Get your queue — a batch of IELTS Writing Task 2 essays appears in your dashboard.
4. Mark — work through them at your own pace via the online form (band per criterion + brief evidence note + overall band). Each essay is independently marked by two examiners — you won't see the other's marks.
5. Quality check — where two markers differ by more than a band, a senior examiner adjudicates. This is normal and expected.
6. Get paid — once your marks are approved, payment is calculated automatically per script.

Total commitment: about 10–15 hours, flexible, over roughly two weeks.

What we ask of you

- Mark independently — to your own examiner judgement, against the descriptors, not to a target.
 - Be consistent — apply the same standard across every script.
 - Quote the evidence — a line or two from the essay for each band, so your mark is auditable.
 - Confidentiality — treat the essays and the work as confidential.
 - Honesty — if an essay is off-topic, under-length, or looks memorised, mark it as you would in a real exam and flag it.

Important, in plain terms

- This is practice-feedback tooling, clearly distinct from an official IELTS test — learners are told that explicitly.
 - Your marks are used to measure and improve the tool's accuracy, never passed off as an official score.
 - We follow UK data-protection law; the essays you mark contain no real candidate's personal details.

Interested?

Reply with:

1. Your IELTS Writing examiner certification (and when it was current), or equivalent qualifications;
2. Your availability over the next 2–3 weeks (rough hours/week);
3. Whether you'd be open to senior/adjudication + exemplar work (higher rate).

We'll come back with your rate and next steps.
